#2 - Two Influenza Related Deaths Reported in Thurston County

FIRST INFLUENZA-RELATED DEATHS REPORTED IN THURSTON COUNTY FOR THE 2023-2024 FLU SEASON

Thurston County Public Health and Social Services (PHSS) was notified of two influenza-related deaths in Thurston County residents. To date, in Washington state, there have been 31 influenza-related deaths reported by the Washington State Department of Health (DOH) during the 2023-2024 influenza season, including one child.

Individuals who get sick with flu symptoms should stay home and avoid contact with others, except to get medical care. While most people with flu have mild illness and do not need medical care or antiviral medications, certain people are at increased risk of serious complications including young children, people 65 and older, pregnant people, and people with certain medical conditions. People in these higher-risk groups are recommended to contact their healthcare provider if they develop flu symptoms.
